

Dr. Daniela Şişcanu is a senior scientific researcher with the Institute for Political Studies of Defence and Military History, Romanian Ministry of National Defence. She holds a master in Politics and Governance of European Integration and International Relations from National School of Political Sciences and Public Administration in Bucharest. Her PhD thesis focused the soviet propaganda concerning Poland, Finland, Baltic Countries and Romania in the years 1939-1940 after the signing of the Soviet-German Non-Aggression Pact.

She is the author of various studies and articles, published in Romania and abroad, concerning the following subjects: regional security, Romanian national security policy, analysis for the crises emerged in the former soviet states. Areas of interest: study of the ideology of Totalitarianism and propaganda machinery in Soviet Union, security and military dynamics in Post-Soviet area, information warfare.